Dear Zarephath Ladies,

Hope you had a good Easter. I feel like it's been quite a while! How are you doing? I know you are on the winning side!! Life may feel hard, the economy and the passions of this day and age may seem adverse, but greater is he that is in us than he that is in the world. For this reason, it is well with you in Jesus name. Believe me when I say, God has your back. He makes ways in the wilderness and carries you on wings like the eagle when your legs grow weary. Just trust him and he will see you through.

TWW had an event in London recently, not many attended, but the few of us that did were really blessed. Let's hope that when we have another, more ZL's will be able to attend. Its good for us to support each other and hold each other up as we journey through life together. Some of us need more support than others. Some just need to be reminded that they are not alone and their case is not unique, while others may need material or physical support. Whatever be the case God has raised up TWW to gather the troops and tend to every wounded soldier till we all stand strong and can be a support to others.

No woman, who has loved and lost, should stay alone. I'm not saying go and find a new partner, but you must find a sister or a friend that you can talk openly to, confide in, trust with your life issues and pray together. Somebody who will willingly help you carry your burden, be it big or small. Human beings we created for companionship, that's why God created Eve for Adam.

My message today is: Do not stand alone. Two is better than one and if God is blessing you with a new husband and you are ready to take that step, then don't block it out. Seek counsel and prayerfully proceed with what you believe God is saying. We will rejoice with you at your second chance. God is faithful and will grant you the desires of your hearts. And if that's not the case and you will continue to be single, then embrace other Godly relationships that are wholesome and beneficial to bringing you to where God has called you to be.

I love you guys and I care what happens to you. Life has turned out different from our original plan but that doesn't mean our lives have to be second rate, our God is faithful and we can make the best lemonade from the lemons we have.

Don't give in, God is still on his throne!!!

Love Always

Tara Talabi.
